Introduction

The information contained in this manual is intended to familiarize persons with the scoring standards and criteria used for the 8th Grade version of the Georgie Criterion-Referenced Writing Test. The material included was taken from the actual training manual used to train raters to understand and apply the scoring system. In the actual training process the manual is used in conjunction with a computer work station. The training manual provides definitions and descriptions of the scoring dimensions and the score scale and specific directions about the rating of real papers. The computer work station directs the rater-trainee in practice exercises and provides feedback regarding practice.

Introduction to the Scoring Dimensions and Scale Points

A list of the five Scoring Dimensions, their definitions, and the components that copy to each dimension is provided on page 4. You should read this page carefully and thoroughly and refer to it often throughout training and also throughout scoring. You may want to remove this page from your manual so that you can refer to it easily, if a separate copy of the page is not provided you for this purpose.

A score of."1" to "4" is to be assigned for each one of the five dimensions of w iting. Appearing beneath the name of each dimension is a list of the components which "define" that dimension. Different aspects of writing competence are to be evaluated in the different dimensions. While the dimensions are interrelated during the writing process, writing strengths and weaknesses are rated only once during the scoring process. In other words, a particular strength or weakness is not rated in two or more dimensions.

Refer to the page listing the five Scoring Dimensions to be sure in which dimension a particular aspect of writing is to be rated. A detailed discussion of the dimension follows the definitions of the scale points.

Definitions of the Four Scale Points

Try to visualize each dimension represented on a line that goes from "Very Poor" to "Very Good." Along the way, four regions are defined and labeled 1, 2, 3 and 4. Such a representation is shown below:

	1	2	3	4
[Very Poor]			 		[Very Good]

This figure shows that each score point replacents a range on the dimension. There can be low 2's, high 2's and typical 2's. The same is true for the other points. A particular paper that you are reading and scoring will rarely seem exactly like the definitions of the four points, but it will be more like one than the other. In other words, a paper that is more like a 3 than a 4, and more like a 3 than a 2, would be rated 3 on that dimension.

Score Point 1: The writing is inadequate. Very few if any of the components for the dimension are demonstrated.

Score Point 2: The writing is Minimal. Some of the components for the dimension are demonstrated.

Score Point 3: The writing is Good, yet not exceptional. Many of the components are demonstrated, and these are demonstrated successfully.

Score Point 4: The writing is Very Good. Most of the components of the dimension are demonstrated, and these are demonstrated consistently.

NOTE: A paper might not demonstrate competence in each component listed under a particular dimension, yet still be scored a "4" on that dimension. Another paper may demonstrate competence in one component but be so week in other components that those weaknesses overpower the single strength. Thus, this second paper may receive a score of "1" on that dimension because of overpowering weaknesses. In other words, strengthe may compensate for weaknesses, and weaknesses may overpower strengths.

Terms used to Define the Scoring Dimensions

Dimension: The Georgia Department of Education has identified several basic qualities in any piece of effective writing, regardless of the topic or type (narrative, expository). The qualities are: Content and Organization, Style, Sentence Formation, Usage, and Mechanics. Each of these is referred to as a dimension or domain of writing.

Component: A component is one of the list of aspects to be considered within a particular dimension. A complete listing of all the scoring dimensions and the components for each dimension appears on page 4. For example, clear pronoun reference is a component of the dimension Usage. When you are deciding on your rating for Usage on a student paper, you would look for demonstrated competence in pronoun reference, along with competence in the other components of that dimension.

Each one of the five dimensions is presented separately. Terms are defined, followed by writing samples selected to illustrate the meaning of some of the terms.

Georgia Criterion-Referenced Writing Test Scoring Dimensions, Definitions and Components

CONTENT/ORGANIZATION: The writer establishes the controlling idea through examples, illustrations and facts or details. There is evidence of a sense of order which is clear and relevant.

- Clearly established controlling idea
- Clearly developed supporting ideas
- Sufficiently relevant supporting ideas
- Clearly discernible order of presentation
- Logical transitions and flow of ideas
- Sense of completeness

STYLE: The writer controls language to establish his/her indiviouality.

- Concrete images and descriptive language
- Easily reedable
- Varied sentence petterns
- Appropriate tone for topic, audience and purpose

SENTENCE FORMATION: The writer forms effective sentences.

- Appropriate end punctuation
- Complute sentences or functional fragments
- Appropriate coordination and/or subordination

USAGE: The writer uses standard American English.

- Clear pronoun references
- Correct subject-verb agreement
- Standard form of verbe and noune
- Correct word choice

MECHANICS: The writer employs devices necessary in standard written American English.

- Appropriate capitalization
- Appropriate internal punctuation
- Appropriate formatting
- Correct spelling

Score Point 1: The writing is Inadequate. Very few if any of the components for the dimension are demonstrated.

Score Point 2: The writing is Minimal. Some of the components for the dimension are demonstrated.

Scrore Point 3: The writing is Good, yet not exceptional. Many of the components are demonstrated, and these are demonstrated successfully.

Score Point 4: The writing is Very Good. Most of the components are demonstrated, and these are demonstrated consistently.

CONTENT/ORGANIZATION: The writer establishes the controlling idea through examples, illustrations and facts or details. There is evidence of a sense of order which is clear and relevant.

- Clearly established controlling idea
- Clearly developed supporting ideas
- Sufficiently relevant supporting ideas
- Clearly discernible order of presentation
- Logical transitions and flow of ideas
- Sense of completeness

Controlling idea: The controlling idea of a piece of writing is not the same as the written "thesis statement," although the controlling idea may be expressed in the form of such a statement. The controlling idea may be either stated or implied; if stated, it may appear toward the beginning or toward the end of the piece of writing, or even inserted in the middle of the text. It may be stated in several sentences. The controlling idea may be apparent to the reader even though there is no direct "thesis statement." The writer may present a written thesis statement, but the actual controlling idea may differ somewhat from the statement. To determine the controlling idea of a piece, ask yourself, "If I had to sum up this piece of writing in one brief sentence, what would that sentence be?"

Order of presentation: A piece of writing may be ordered or organized in many different ways: chronological, a listing of ideas related to the topic, a series of examples illustrating the controlling idea, a comparison or contrast, identification of a problem followed by a proposed solution, a generalization followed by a narrative illustration of the generalization. These are but a few of the possible orders. In an effective piece of writing, the order of presentation is appropriate to the controlling idea.

CONTENT AND ORGANIZATION: Controlling Idea

Statements suggesting the writer's controlling Hea are underlined. Note that the controlling idea is not stated in a thesis statement or in a single sentence, but is a combination of the first two sentences. The information in the paragraphs in between these sentences explains why Bar Mitzvah was the happiest time in the writer's life both in terms of the celebration itself and the end of the hard work.

CONTENT AND ORGANIZATION: Controlling idea and Order of Presentation

related to the idea that the best gift was the computer, control is lost. The reader is never sold very much about the actual gift or why it was the best gift.

in terms of the order of presertation of ideas, the writer has employed a chronological accounting of the events of his/her birthday. The organization is ineffective, as it does not provide for a means of explaining the nature of the gift.

Rather than being about "why the computer was the best gift I ever received," the paper is about "what happened on my birthday."

ever recheved recieved was

CONTENT AND ORGANIZATION: Controlling idea and Order of Presentation

The paper has no apparent controlling idea. Each paragraph appears to jump to a new topic, only connected by the repetition of the word "friend."

The order of presentation is confusing, shifting from a contrast of "happiness" to "sadness" in the first two paragraphs, to a definition of a "friend" in the third paragraph, to a orief explanation in the fourth paragraph of why the writer values his friends, to an attempt in the final paragraph to appeal to the reader's awareness of similar experiences.

STYLE: The writer controls language to establish his/her individuality.

- Concrete images and descriptive language
- Easily readable
- Varied sentence patterns
- Appropriate tone for topic, audience and purpose

Imagery or concrete images and descriptive language: A writer uses imagery when he or she uses descriptive language that appeals to the senses of the reader. This type of language enables the reader to "experience" the piece of writing more or less directly. Either concreto images or descriptive language creates word-pictures that enable the reader to share the writer's experience. The writer may use either concrete words or descriptive language.

Readable: "Readable" does not refer to the legibility of the handwriting. Rather, it addresses the ease with which the piece of writing could be read aloud without false starts or backing up and re-reading to "make sense."

Sentence patterns: The pattern of a sentence refers to the grammatical structure, the order of the words and the length. Some of the possible sentence patterns are: simple, compound, complex, subject-first, beginning with a phrase or clause, or beginning with a sentence connective.

Tone: Tone indicates the writer's sensitivity to the purpose of the piece of writing and to the effect the piece of writing should have on the audience. Simply, tone refers to the general mood or emotion brought forth by the piece of writing. Tone π ay be formal or informal, witty, ironic, 'sarcastic, humorous, informative, sorrowful, ecstatic...and so on.

STYLE: Sentence Patterns and Concrete Images

The sentence patterns in this piece are varied in terms of structure, word order and length. Sentence beginnings include subject-first, introductory phrases and clauses ("After pulling on" and "As the sun shone") and sentence connectives (such as "However" and "Then").

Some of the images (underlined) are concrete, appealing to the reader's sense of sight (the dew on the pine needles sparkling like diamonds), hearing (the sounds of the quiet morning, the animals, and the pet dogs) and touch (wearing basts to keep the feet dry).

$TYLE: Sentence Patterns

Very few of the sentences are varied in structure or length. Most of the sentences consist of a monotonous repetition of "I like X," "I enjoy X" and "my favorite gift is X." The repetitions are circled.

The images tend to be vague. Except for the house, the reader cannot really "see" the gifts being described.

SENTENCE FORMATION: The writer forms effective sentences.

- Appropriate end punctuation
- Complete sentences or functional fragments
- Appropriate coordination and/or subordination

End punctuation: End punctuation refers to the use of the period, question mark or exclamation point to mark the end of a sentence. The absence of appropriate end punctuation creates sentence formation errors known as a comma splice or a fused sentence. A comma splice error occurs when two sentences are linked with a comma ("The weather was cord, I wors my dad's jacket"). A fused sentence or run-on error occurs when two sentences are run together without any punctuation.

Fragment or seritence fragment: As the term suggests, a fragment refers to an incomplete sentence which is lacking one or more of its parts but is written as if it were a complete sentence. A fragment may be caused by improper punctuation, as when a writer places a period between a main clause and the subordinate clause ("The happiest time of my life was when we went to Walt Disney World. Because that was our first vacation as a family.") Such a punctuation-based fragment is considered an error in sentence formation. A "functional fragment" is one over which the writer seems to have control, one which is used to create a particular effect ("And when were we leaving? In the morning! Bright and early!").

Coordination: Coordination refers to the connecting of equal grammatical structures to provide equal emphasis. Coordinating elements include (but are not limited to) connectors such as "and," "but" and "or.": The semi-colon, used to connect two independent clauses, serves as a signal of coordination.

Subordination: Subordination refers to a method of connecting structures so as to give some structures less emphasis than others. Examples of subordinating connectors are "br@ause," "when," "if," "after," "while," "although," "so that," "who," "which" and "that."

SENTENCE FORMATION:Coordination and End Puctuation

The coordinating connector is enclosed in a box [], and the elements which are connected are circled.

inappropriate end punctuation (the comma) is noted with \triangle . The absence of appropriate punctuation creates run-on sentences.

Note: not all instances of coordination are marked.

SENTENCE FORMATION: !neffective Coordination

In an epparent attempt to link sentences and indicate the sequence of events, the writer overuses the connectors "so" and "then" (underlined). While the end punctuation is correct, the repeated use of these two connectors with short sentences creates the effect of rantagether thoughts.

USAGE: The writer uses standard American English.

- Clear pronoun references
- Correct subject-verb agreement
- Standard form of verbs and nouns
- Correct word choice

Standard American English, standard form: "Standard" refers to careful word choice and to the use of those grammatical conventions agreed upon as the "language of the marketplace." Standard American English avoids the use of sleng, jargon, regionalisms, and unacceptable forms except when appropriate to the topic and the audience. Also, standard American English uses the agreed-upon forms for plurale, possessives, subject-and-verb agreement and the formation of verb tenses. Competence and errors in usage can be "heard."

Pronoun reference: Pronoun reference involves the relationship between a single word or group of words (the antecedent) and the pronoun replacement. The meaning of the pronoun should be immediately obvious to avoid confusion. Clarity is achieved through consistency of person and number ("My favorite sport is volley ball, but ! It's swimming too. They have to be played with teammates...." "They" refers to both sports, while the writer intends a singular reference to volleyball, or "It"). Broad references ("It," "this") can create confusion, particularly when overused.

Word choice: Word choice refers to the writer's use of words which express his or her ideas clearly and which demonstrate appropriate usage. For example, word choice includes an awareness of the differences between "a" and "an," "accept" and "except" and "except" and "le" and "ley." Word choice also includes the appropriate forms of adjectives and adverbs, ("the worst time in my life," "really herd") and correct pronoun case ("hisy parents gave my brother and me").

MECHANICS: Formatting, Spelling and Capitalization

Errors in spelling and capitalization are noted. Corrections are provided in the margin.

Formatting is marked with arrows (->). Separating paragraphs by skipping lines is not standard form in a paper. At best, the skipped lines are unnecessary. The paragraph beginnings show minimal indentation, particularly when compared to the occasional indentation of subsequent lines. Spacing between words is appropriate.

Note: Net all instances are marked

arads you could go out enowed you could go ... Hentico

Lack of capitalization is noted by circling letters.

Misspelled words are underlined.

incorrect use of possessive form "their" for "there" has to be seen to be identified.

(Note: This error would be evaluated in Sentence Formation. It is not counted again as a capitalization error.)

Does not appear from the height of the letters (see |)that the proper noun begins with a capital "C."

(This error would be accounted for in Sentence Formation. The error is not counted again.)

Seasons are not capitalized.

But use alubys had fur.

MECHANICS: Internal Punctuation

Correct internal punctuation is marked. Incorrect internal punctuation also is noted and corrections are provided in the margin.

Correct use of comma after introductory clauses. Correct use of comma and quotations marks in punctuation of dialogue. Correct use of commas to separate independent clauses . First comma is inappropriate. Second comma is correct. Correct use of commas to set off the use of "not only...but also." for Florida because Comma correctly used after introductory ciauses. Correct plural posnessive form.

MECHANICS: Formatting, Spelling, and Internal Punctuation

Spelling errors are underlined.

Both errors and correct instances of internal punctuation are noted. Corrections are provided in the margin.

in terms of formatting, (see >>) the indentation of the beginning of paragraphs is inconsistent, ranging from half an inch to almost two inchés. The left hand margin is uneven. Also, many of the paragraphs are one sentence "nonparagraphs."

Guidelines for Scoring

- 1. Leave your personal grading standards at home. Put away any preconceived ideas you might have as to what ought to be expected of a student at this age or grade level. Rate each paper only for the five dimensions defined in this Manual, only for the components outlined for each dimension, and only on the four-point scale given you.
- 2. Remember throughout training and scoring that you are to operate from a "competence perspective"—not an "error perspective." This means that in order to rate a paper accurately, you must read it looking for a demonstration of competence in each dimension based on the components listed. To "count errors" as you read will often cause you to make mistakes in judgment. Rather, you should be continually asking yourself as you read, "Has this writer demonstrated his or her competence in this dimension, and, if so, how well?" The model papers will serve as your guide for defining this competence.
- 3. Don't confuse the appearance of the paper with competence. Assign a score based on each dimension—not on the length, neatness, or legibility of the paper.
- 4. Keep in mind that you are scoring the writing sample, not the writer. Your subjective response ("I like this kid," "I find this topic boring," "I agree with what the writer is saying," "I wish the writer had not shared this information with me") is to be kept separate from the scores you assign.
- 5. Remember that the scale contains four points and four points only. A paper cannot receive a score of "0" or "5." Ravis- the model papers and their annotations periodically to avoid redefining the scale because of the papers you have read.
- 6. If the writer provided a title at the beginning of the essay, you should not consider that a part of the text you are scoring.
- 7. Keep in mind the distinction between copying/proofreading errors-such as omitted words or phrases and duplicated words-and errors in usage and mechanics.
- 8. Papers that cannot be assigned a rating of "1" to "4" are discussed in the scoring portion of this manual under "Non Scorable Paper Codes."

Suggestions for Keeping the Dimensions Separate

Content/Organization: Read the paper looking for evidence of a stated or implied controlling idea (not necessarily a thesis statement or statement of purpose); for development through the use of explanation, detail, and/or example; and for an organizational plan that is easy to follow.

Style: Read for evidence of individuality. Does there seem to be a definite personality behind the words? Does the writer appeal to any of your five senses? Can you see any pictures or scenes as you read?

Sentance Formation: Read for competence at the sentence level.

Usage: Read for demonstration of competence and/or the presence of usage errors you would hear if the paper were read aloud to you.

Mechanics: Read for demonstration of competence and/or the presence of errors you would notice only if you saw the paper.

Model Papers

On the following pages you will find the first six training papers, which are referred to as Model Papers. Following each model paper is a set of scores and rationale statements for each of the scoring dimensions for that Model Paper. The rationale statements or annotations explain why the scores assigned to that paper are correct. These six Model Papers illustrate and define the precise meaning of each score point on each dimension. Studying these papers with their accompanying annotations will give the reader valuable insights into the meaning of the scoring scale.

Following these Model Papers is a section that includes Non Scorable Paper (NSP) codes and examples of papers that have been given these codes. An NSP is a paper that cannot be scored using the scoring criteria because of some anomaly (e.g. an off-topic paper, an illegible paper, etc.). The final section in this manual contains a Giossary of terms used throughout this manual.

Annotation

Model Paper 1

Grade 8

Content/Organization (4)

The controlling idea is clearly implied. Support is ordered around an anticipation—fulfillment sequence of events. Some of the detail is not directly relevant. The paper has a sense of completeness.

Style (3)

Individuality is evident, especially in the sense of anticipation and pleasure and the detail of the conversation in the office. Sentence variety is minimal. In parts, the paper is not easily readable.

Sentence Formation (2)

Paper demonstrates little control in several sentences. However, while many sentences are run together, others are correct. "And" is over-upod to coordinate elements.

Usego (2)

Usage errors include pronoun agreement, verb form and word choice ("were this beautiful big red roses," "them flowers," "she teached"). Competence includes clear pronoun reference and many instances of correct nouns and verbs.

Mechanics (1)

Formatting (lack of paragraphing), failure to punctuate the dialogue and lack of commas are major problems. Several words are misspelled, although a few may be proofreading errors.

Domain ratings are enclosed in parentheses.

Contect/Organization (2)

While a controlling idea is stated, it is not clear and leads to problems in organization and development. The paper is an unsuccessful attempt to force the development of "3 things." Some support is evident. The order of presentation is confusing.

Style (2)

Most of the language is purely functional, not descriptive. There is an occasional glimpee of individuality. Sentence valety is minimal.

Sentence Formation (3)

Generally, sentences are correctly constructed and punctueted. The paper contains one, possibly two fragments: the appearance of "time, in school" mokes evaluation difficult. Skill in coordination and subordination is not demonstrated.

Ueage (3) ·

Many components are demonstrated. Word choice is a major weakness ("I got," "a set of three things," "Everybody, that includes," "the getting of" and the repetition of "things").

Mechanics (3)

Problems with capitalization and spelling are minor. Formatting is week, both in terms of the erratic left-hand margin and lack of paragraphing. Internal punctuation is generally correct.

Domain ratings are enclosed in parentheses.

Model Paper 3

Grade 8

Content/Organization (1)

The controlling idea is barely discernible. Contrast and chronological organization are unsuccessful. Transitions are confusing. Support is relevant but inadequate, with information gaps. The final sentence fails to achieve completeness.

Style (2)

The paper contains glimmers of individuality in the use of dialogue. The paper is not easily readable throughout due to abrupt time shifts. Sentence variety is minimal, with heavy reliance on simple sentences.

Sentence Formation (2)

Sentences are appropriately punctuated but ineffective. Subordination and coordination are simplistic. The proportion of effective to ineffective sentences is inadequate, given the shortness of the paper. The paper is a low 2.

Usage (2)

The paper is a high two. Some components are demonstrated in a limited fashion. There are two verb errors: "sister ask me if she could ride." Other verb forms are correct. Word choice (oral forms, "well" and "see") is inappropriate.

Mechanics (2)

The paper contains a number of misspellings of common words and a few errors in capitalization not attributable to handwriting. Competence in internal punctuation is demonstrated.

Domain ratings are enclosed in parentheses.

Model Paper 4

Grade 8

Content/Organization (4)

The controlling idea is clear. The support is balanced, relevant and developed, with a variety of examples (appreciation of the little things, the serious conversations). The paper has a sense of completeness.

Style (4)

The controlled, conversational language is effective and descriptive. The paper is easily readable. Sentence pathorns are varied. Notalgic tone is captured.

Sentence Formation (4)

End punctuation is appropriate. Almost all sentences are complete; the single fragment is functional. Subordination and coordination are handled with skill.

Usage (4)

All components are demonstrated consistently.

Mechanics (4)

The paper contains minor problems with spelling and internal punctuation. Overall, competence in all components is demonstrated.

Domain ratings are enclosed in parentheses.

Model Paper 5

Grade 8

Content/Organization (2)

While a topic is clear, a controlling idea is not clearly established. Supporting information is present but not always relevant or appropriately grouped.

Style (1)

The paper is not easily readable. The language is functional and the tone is flat. Sentence patterns are not varied.

Sentence Formation (1)

The paper contains many instances of fragments, run-ons and run-together sentences.

Usage (1)

The paper contains errors in word choice, verb formation and subject-verb agreement. Pronoun reference is not clear.

Mechanics (1)

Formatting and internal punctuation are weak. So many words are misspelled that evidence of competence in other components is diminished.

Domain ratings are enclosed in parentnesse.

Model Paper - 6 Page 1

Model Paper 6

Grade 8

Content/Organization (3)

While the paper's appearance interferes with rating, the controlling idea is both reasonably clear and developed. Some of the support is a list of events rather than development. The sequential order is clear. The paper has a sense of completeness.

Style (3)

Images of the writer-parent interaction are clear although the language is not descriptive. The conversational language is appropriate. Sentence patterns are reasonably varied. Tone is appropriate and effective. Overall, the paper is not easily readable.

Sentence Formation (2)

End punctuation marks are not used systematically. While many sentences are complete, only a few end with the correct punctuation. There is some evidence of subordination. Paper contains some fragments.

Jeege (3)

The writer's command of many usage concepts is reasonable. There are verb tense and agreement errors, but most verb forms are correct. Referents for "It" are not always clear. Word choice is appropriate.

Mechanics (1)

Formatting is weak. The paper has internal punctuation problems, especially the "dots." Words are misspelled. Capitalization is arbitrary.

Domain ratings are enclosed in parentheses.

Coding Non Scorable Papers

The following codes are to be assigned to papers which cannot be assigned a rating of 1 through 4. Definitions of the codes are provided below followed by example papers illustrating the codes.

Code Definition

A Blank

Assign to any paper which is completely blank. Be sure to check the front and back page.

B Too Short

Assign to any paper containing too little information for determining appropriate scores. Such responses include a single word, phrase, line, or sentence and may include responses of a few lines. Given the variability of handwriting and content, no exact number of lines can be specified. (Examples of short papers with enough information to be scored are included in the training papers.)

C Non English

Assign to any paper written in a foreign language.

E Megible

Before assigning the code make a reasonable attempt to recognize enough words to use them as a basis for figuring out what the other words are.

F incomprehensible

Read the paper is its entirety before assigning this code. Do not confuse spelling errors with incomprehensibility. An incomprehensible paper may contain few recognizable English words, or it may contain recognizable English words arranged in such a way that no meaning is conveyed.

G Off Topic

Familiarize yourself with the assigned topic. Consider that the paper may be a variation on the topic. [Example of a scorable variation of the topic "your favorite holiday:" "I don't have a favorite holiday and here's why." Examples of scorable variations on the topic "the biggest problem you had with someone:" "My problem is with the people who made up this test," or "My best friend has this really bad problem with his mother."]

Addressing some aspect of the topic is acceptable. For example, it is possible to write about "what you think your future will be like" as if the future has already arrived: "I am a successful lawyer...."

H Off Task

This coc's applies to responses that are not on the task of writing a Basic Skills Writing Test. Off Task responses include: copying from the test directions or test booklet or from some material in the testing area; writing a response consisting solely of a message to the rater ("I won't complete this stupid test," or "I have passed this thing already but Mr. Jones won't believe me.") Off Task responses also include inappropriate types of writing such as poetry and rap.

GLOSSARY

Component - A component is one of the list of aspects to be considered within a particular dimension. A complete listing of all the scoring dimensions and the components for each dimension appears on the sheet titled "Georgia Basic Skills Writing Test: Scoring Dimensions, Definitions, and Components." For example, "clear pronoun reference" is a component of the dimension "Usage." When you are deciding on your rating for "Usage" on a student paper, you would look for demonstrated competence in pronoun reference, along with competence in the other components of that dimension.

Controlling idea - The controlling idea of a piece of writing is not the same as the written "thesis statement," although the controlling idea may be expressed in the form of such a statement. The controlling idea may be either stated or implied; if stated, it may appear toward the beginning or toward the end of the piece of writing, or even inserted in the middle of the text. It may be stated in several sentences. The controlling idea may be apparent to the reader even though there is no direct "thesis statement." The writer may present a written thesis statement, but the actual controlling idea may differ somewhat from the statement. To determine the controlling idea of a piece, ask yourself, "If I had to sum up this piece of writing in one brief sentence, what would that sentence be?"

Coordination - Refers to the connecting of equal grammatical structures to provide equal emphasis. Coordinating elements include (but are not limited to) connectors such as "and," "but," and "or." The semi-colon, used to connect two independent clauses, serves as a signal of coordination.

Dimension or Domain - The Georgia Department of Education has identified several basic qualities in any piece of effective writing, regardless of the topic or type (narrative, expository). The qualities are: Content and Organization, Style, Sentence Formation, Usage and Mochanics. Each of these is referred to as a dimension or domain of writing.

End punctuation - Refers to the use of the period, question mark, or exciamation point to mark the end of a sentence. The absence of appropriate end punctuation creates sentence formation errors known as a comma splice error or a fused sentence. A comma splice error occurs when two sentences are linked with a comma ("The weather was cold, I wore my dad's jacket"). A fused sentence or run-on error occurs when two sentences are run together without any punctuation.

Formatting - Refers to the layout of the piece of writing on the page-margins, paragraph indentation, specing between words and specing between sentences. Writers and readers have agreed on certain spatial conventions for clarity and ease of reading, and words are placed on the page in accordance with these conventions. Formatting also refers to the appropriate grouping of related information into paragraphs.

Fragment or Sentence fragment - As the term suggests, a fragment refers to an incomplete sentence which is lacking one or more of its parts but is written as if it were a complete sentence. A fragment may be caused by improper punctuation, as when a writer places a period between a main clause and the subordinate clause ("The happiest time of my life was when we went to Walt Dieney World. Because that was our first vacation as a family."), Such a punctuation-based fragment is considered an error in sentence formation. A "functional fragment" is one over which the writer seems to have control, one which is used to create a particular effect ("And when were we leaving? In the morning! Bright and early!").

imagery or Concrete images - A writer uses imagery when he or she uses descriptive language that appeals to the senses of the reader. This type of language enables the reader to "experience" the piece of writing more or less directly.

Internal punctuation - As coposed to "end punctuation," internal punctuation appears within a sentence: for example, quotation marks and commas in dialogue; commas between words in a series; commas after introductory clauses and phrases; commas setting off nonrestrictive elements; commas after transition words. Such errors have to be "seen" to be noted.

Order of presentation - A piece of writing may be ordered or organized in many different ways: chronological, a listing of ideas related to the topic, a series of examples illustrating the controlling idea, a comparison or contrast, identification of a problem followed by a proposed solution, a generalization followed by a narrative illustration of the generalization. These are but a few of the possible orders. In an effective piece of writing, the order of presentation is appropriate to the controlling idea.

Pronoun reference - Pronoun reference involves the relationship between a single word or group of words (the antecedent) and the pronoun replacement. The meaning of the pronoun should be immediately obvious to avoid confusion. Clarity is achieved through consistency of person and number ("My favorite sport is volleyball, but I like swimming too. They have to be played with teammates..." "They" refers to both sports, while the writer intends a singular reference to volleyball, or "" Broad references ("it," "this") can create confusion, particularly when overused.

Readable - "Readable" does not refer to the legibility of the handwriting. Rather, it addresses the ease with which the piece of writing could be read aloud without false starts or backing up and re-reading to "make sense."

Sentence patterns - The pattern of a sentence refers to the grammatical structure, the order of the words, and the length. Some of the possible sentence patterns are: simple, compound, complex, subject-first, beginning with a phrase or clause, or beginning with a sentence connective.

Standard American English, standard form - "Standard" refers to careful word choice and to the use of those grammsical conventions agreed upon as the "language of the marketplace." Standard American English avoids the use of slang, jargon, regionalisms, and unacceptable forms except when appropriate to the topic and the audience. Also, standard American English uses the agreed-upon forms for plurals, possessives, subject-and-verb agreement and the formation of verb tenses. Compressives and errors in usage can be "heard."

Subordination - Refers to a method of connecting structures so us to give some structures less emphasis than others. Examples of subordinating connectors are "because," "when," "#," "after," "while," "although," "so that," "who," "which" and "that."

Tone - Indicates the writer's sensitivity to the purpose of the piece of writing and to the effect the piece of writing should have on the audience. Simply, tone refers to the general mood or emotion brought forth by the piece of writing. Tone may be formal or informal, witty, ironic, sercestic, humorous, informative, sorrowful, ecstatic...and so on.

Word choice - Word choice refers to the writer's use of worde which express his or her ideas clearly and which demonstrate appropriate usage. For example, fivord choice includes an awareness of the differences between "a" and "an," "accs, ι " and "except" and "lie" and "ley." Word choice also includes the appropriate forms of adjectives and adverbs ("the worst time of my life," "really hard") and correct pronoun case ("My parents gave "my brother and me").
